

BWAY Acquires K LW Plastics

With the deal Stone Canyon LLC grows its container and packaging business.

September 13, 2016
Recycling Today Staff

Subscribe

Plastics

BWAY Corp., a Stone Canyon Industries LLC company, has announced the acquisition of K LW Plastics, Monroe, Ohio, from Koda Enterprises Group.

K LW Plastics is a manufacturer of one-to-seven gallon, tight-head plastic containers and UN-rated packaging. The company's product line serves the food, chemical and agricultural end markets. K LW Plastics has expanded its line of packaging solutions to include a sustainable tight-head container made of 60 percent post-consumer resin.

In announcing the deal, Ken Roessler, BWAY's president and CEO, says, "This business is an excellent fit with the company's core market, add-on acquisition strategy. In addition to sales growth, this acquisition expands our product offering with innovative new products, which further support the company's goal of positioning BWAY as the premier supplier for rigid general line packaging."

The deal follows Stone Canyon LLC, a holding company based in Santa Monica, California, acquiring BWAY Corp. in August for $2.4 billion.

